Corporate Review and MD Plastics Discuss Innovation in Plastics Industry

January 28, 2015 - Boca Raton, Florida - Although the plastics industry is known for being slow when it comes to adopting new technology, MD Plastics hopes to revolutionize the industry by using some of the latest developments to provide customers with superior and cost-saving products. The company owns their own intellectual property that has been developed, tested, and patented. Tune in to watch the MD Plastics segment airing on Bloomberg Asia Pacific (as pd. prog) on February 1, 2015 at 3:00pm HKT. Check your local listings for airtimes.

MD Plastics has dedicated itself to understanding what has been going on at every level of their business, which has led them to seek technologies that helps them improve their production. New developments are continually made, such as with resins, and the companies who strive to change and adapt them position themselves to be at the forefront of the industry.

The Vice President of Programming, JL Haber, describes the importance of MD Plastics by saying, "Plastics are everywhere and in nearly everything we use on a regular basis. When we learned about how MD Plastics works to adopt the latest technology to improve production, reduce costs, and become more efficient, we were eager to get them on the show. We believe that such a company can have an enormous impact on the industry as a whole."

MD Plastics prides itself on attention to detail, prompt service, and superior quality. They offer much more efficient services than their competitors. They specialize in producing screw, barrel, and valve components that offer better design, offering customers and the industry innovative ideas and processes.

Those interested in learning more about how MD Plastics takes the plastics industry to the next level should watch this latest episode of Corporate Review airing on Bloomberg Asia Pacific (as pd. prog) on February 1, 2015 at 3:00pm HKT. Check your local listings for airtimes.
